

System Design

The architecture separates parsing from layout analysis so each stage can be tested independently.

Figure 1: High-level conversion pipeline.

Each component communicates through plain data structures, which keeps the engine portable across browser and server runtimes.